Change is happening in your organization – every day. Like many organizations, you are making changes to be more efficient, more competitive, and more profitable. In all of these efforts, there is one common denominator for achieving the intended outcomes of your initiative: people.

To be successful, you need to help individual people apply the change to their work: their processes, job roles, workflows, reporting structures, behaviors and even their identity within the organization. So, how do you do that? This presentation will provide some practical tips on how to make your change stick.

Our chapter theme this year is, "Records Management: Not Just a Job - A Profession."
